LEVITTOWN, PA., SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 13, 1963

PRICE SEVEN CENTS

The radiance of Easter comes from many of the traditional symbols of this joyous religious festival.

It shines through the stained glass windows of Christian churches around the world.

It swells from the throats of countless choirs lifting their voices heavenward in rapture at the Resurrection.

It sparkles in the eyes of children gleefully clutching a basket of gaily colored eggs.

It shimmers with silent pleasure over new apparel or be-flowered bonnets.

But most luminous of all, it glows in the eyes of those who see Purity, Light, and Joy reflected in an Easter Lily—perhaps the purest symbol of the triumph of life over death—the true splendor of Eastertide.

Churches Set Special Rites Tomorrow

By SCOOP LEWIS
Courier-Times Staff Writer

Lower Bucks Countians will observe Easter Sunday—marking the resurrection of Christ from the dead—at special church services tomorrow.

Annual Easter Parade Plans Completed

The annual Easter Parade sponsored by the Levittown Businessmen's Association will take place tomorrow from 1 to 3 p.m. after local Easter Sunday services on the mall of the Levittown Shopping Center.

The parade, which has become a tradition also will feature the appearance of the Greater Bucks County String Band under the direction of Captain Frank Weller in their new Dixie costumes and appropriate string band music.

The panel of judges this year will be headed by Kathy Finegan, woman's pages editor of the Bristol Courier-Levittown Times. Miss Finnegan will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fell, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. McNamara, Horace Greeley McVab and others associated with the board of directors of the Levittown Businessmen's Association.

Prizes will be awarded to contestants in the following categories: Best dressed family, best dressed couple, best dressed man and woman, best dressed teenage boy and girl, best dressed boy and girl from six to 12, best dressed pre-school boy and girl, best dressed baby boy and girl, most beautiful hat and cutest pet.

Gems Stolen At Rutgers

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI)—Police today sought a thief who stole about $25,000 worth of uncut gems from Rutgers University, which if cut correctly could be worth $100,000.

One of the stones was a six-sided emerald of several hundred karats, for which Rutgers once had been offered $14,000. The stone, about 1.5 inches wide, is the largest emerald ever taken from the Muzo mines in Colombia, South America.

Professor Helgi Johnson of the university Geology Department said "A representative of the mine once jokingly said the stone could be cut into $60,000 worth of emeralds. It wouldn't be fair to quote him as saying that, because he was joking, but the stone was worth a considerable amount of money."

The emerald was a part of the Albert Chester collection, willed to the university 60 years ago by the famed geologist's widow.

Another of the missing stones is an aquamarine worth about $4,000 in its uncut state.

Johnson said he discovered an unknown number of stones missing from mineral cases in the unguarded Rutgers University museum Friday.

"Whoever stole the stones knew what he was taking," Johnson said. "He was very selective and took the mineral specimens with the most value."

He said the thief used a screw driver or chisel on several of the glass cases. The exact amount of the theft will not be known until inventory is taken Monday, he said.

Custodians To Seminar

BEDFORD, N.Y. (UPI)—Custodial maintenance men at 11 Westchester County schools will attend a seminar next week.

On the agenda is an address on "Advantages and Techniques of Dust-Mop Sweeping."

Along The Shore Line...

There was no question that trout season officially opened in Pennsylvania this morning. Men, women and children crowded the banks of Lakeside Lake, Levittown, to try their luck at hooking trout.

18-Year-Old Killed In Crash On Route 13

An 18-year-old Philadelphia was killed and two teen-age companions seriously injured early this morning when their south-bound car hit a tree and turned over on Route 13, near Street Road, Cornwells Heights.

Thrown from the convertible car and killed was the driver, Robert J. Kolonziejski. He was dead on arrival at Lower Bucks County Hospital.

Robert Candidus, 17, of Philadelphia, suffered possible concussion and possible internal injuries in the crash. Admitted to the hospital, he is in fair condition today.

Robert Swenson, 17, of Philadelphia, suffered a possible concussion. His condition today is satisfactory, according to a hospital spokesman.

Bensalem Township police said the car was travelling too fast for conditions. They reported that the road is under construction where the accident happened.

The car hit two barrels filled with sand that were placed in the road and then careened directly across the road and struck the tree, police said.

The youth died of multiple internal injuries and a fractured skull, according to John Black, deputy county coroner.

The fatality is the 25th in Bucks County this year and the 17th in Lower Bucks.

6 Repairmen Escape Death As Truck Hits Phone Cable

Traffic on Route 13 was disrupted for several hours today and some 500 homes in the Bristol area were without telephone service following an accident in which six men narrowly escaped death.

It all came about when a telephone cable became a fearsome instrument of destruction on Route 13 at Beaver Dam Road, Bristol Township.

A tractor-trailer struck the cable, pulling down three telephone poles, bending a trio of traffic signals in half and bowling over a telephone cable truck.

Telephone officials expected service to the homes to be restored by 2 p.m.

Route 13 traffic was restricted to single lane movement for passenger cars. All trucks were being re-routed through Bristol. Police set up barricades blocking off access to Beaver Dam Road on both sides of Route 13. The temporary blockade was expected to be lifted late this afternoon.

Six men standing near the truck raced out of the way just in time to avoid injury or death.

The accident followed on the heels of another accident in which a motorist apparently lost control of his car and knocked over a pole at the intersection. Telephone lines fell disrupting service in the area.

At 2:30 a.m., Harry Swartz, 28, of 6 Schumacher Drive, Bristol, suffered a possible concussion when his car knocked the pole down. His condition was described as satisfactory in Lower Bucks County Hospital today.

Telephone company employees and trucks arrived to repair the damage.

Bristol Township Police said the Route 13 was lighted to warn drivers of the danger area.

At 4:30 a.m., police said the truck, southbound on Route 13, came at an excessive speed and ran into the cable stretched across the highway at a height of 11 feet. The heavy cable did not break, but swept down three traffic signals and three more poles on Beaver Dam Road. It also turned the telephone truck on its side.

The driver, Edward E. Graeff, was not injured, police said. The 42-year-old driver lives in Palmyra, Pa.

Police said six men, who were working on the pole knocked down by Swartz's car were warned of the oncoming truck by a fellow worker who was sitting in a truck on Route 13.

The man in the telephone truck tooted his horn when he saw the trailer coming, giving the other men time to get out of the way, it was stated.

Members of the Bell Telephone crew were Howard Bailey, 44708 Brookside Ave., Laurel Ben, Bristol Township; George Johnson, 3819 Groveland Ave., Newportville, Bristol Township; Ben Samuel, 3408 Knights Road, Cornwells Heights; James Wright, R.D. 1, Langhorne and Frank McLaughlin, 323 Delaware Ave., Langhorne; all linemen; and construction foreman M. J. McCormick of 507 Wheatley Ave., Beverly, N.J.

Doug Tolley, Bucks County division operations manager, and Howard Nelson, district construction superintendent, are on the scene directing repair work operations.

This is the second major cable disruption within a week in Bucks County. Last week a cable was broken near Warminster on Route 611 and 400 subscribers lost service.

The truck driver will be charged with driving too fast for conditions, police said.

Pole, Cable, Truck Hit

This photo, looking south on Beaver Dam Road across Route 13, shows part of the damage at the intersection. The telephone pole lying in the roadway was knocked down by a motorist. Later, a trailer truck, struck a cable across Route 13, bowling over the telephone cable truck. (Courier-Times Photo)

...What A Line

Andrew Laczkowski of 16 Aster Lane, Appletree, Levittown, probably doesn't believe in fish stories and actually he doesn't have to tell any. This string of six trout tells the story. Former Skipper Testifies Sub Had Trouble On 1st Dive

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. (UPI)—A former skipper of the ill-fated submarine Thresher testified before a Navy court of inquiry today the vessel had "trouble" on the first deep dive shortly after it was commissioned in August, 1961.

Cmdr. Deane L. Axene said the dive was virtually at the same spot in the Atlantic where the Thresher sank Wednesday with a loss of 129 men.

Axene, presently on leave, was the first witness as the naval board resumed its investigation into the worst accident in submarine history. The Thresher underwent an overhaul and repairs at its home base here prior to its ill-fated voyage.

4 Scientists Transferred

ABOARD THE USS HAZELWOOD (UPI)—Four scientists were transferred to the marine research vessel Atlantis II today and immediately began making preparations to map part of the North Atlantic's floor where the sunken nuclear-powered submarine Thresher may be lying with 129 men aboard.

The transfer in a calmer, but still turbulent, ocean was accomplished by use of a canvas sling drawn by a pulley across 65 feet of rope stretched from this destroyer to the Atlantis.

The mapping of the ocean floor one and a half miles deep was to start later today.

The Hazelwood also was preparing to drop a 1,200-pound anchor on a nylon line more than a mile and a half long. A "signpost" buoy will be attached to the line as a marker where the Thresher started her ill-fated dive. The buoy will serve as a permanent reference for search vessels.

Scientist John G. Bruce of the Woods Hole, Mass., Oceanographic Institution was in charge of the marking operation.

Three destroyers participating in the search were to line up abreast about 1,000 yards apart and were to cross slowly over the Thresher's grave in search for the doomed submarine. They will use their own depth sounding equipment during the hunt.

The ocean was much calmer today but still was turbulent. Visibility was very good. The scientists' crossings were smooth and took about 20 minutes.

Soviet Orbits New Satellite

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviet Union today shot its third known unmanned satellite into orbit this year in a stepped-up race in space with the United States.

The official Soviet Tass news agency said the newest satellite was named Cosmos 13, equipped with scientific instruments "designed to continue the study of outer space."

Tass said the radio-equipped satellite was "functioning normally" and was sending back scientific information which was being received and processed by a "coordination computing center" on the ground.

The new satellite was reported circling the earth once every 90 minutes, in an orbit that ranged from 323.54 miles at its farthest point to 164 miles at its lowest.

The new launching came just a day after the Soviets observed the second anniversary of man's first flight into space by Maj. Yuri Gagarin on April 12, 1961.

On March 21, the Russians launched Cosmos 13 as an earth satellite.

Lunik 4 was shot into space on April 2 as a moon probe. It passed within 5,270 miles of the moon on April 6 and then went into orbit around the earth. The Russians said it later will be pulled into an orbit around the sun.

Good Evening!

The Easter weekend.

Ideal weather for it all the way and that ol' Mister Bunny will be hopping all over the place.

Great day for the ladies, for the youngsters.

And you know where the nicest of all of the Parades will be? Right at our own Levittown Shopping Center Mall. All righty, we'll see you there.

We'd also like to see you as a member of the Courier-Times "travel club" planning 15 glorious days in Europe's six more glamorous capitals in July.

It's to be the vacation of all Dream Vacations. Why not get in touch with our travel editor Paul Altaire right now and familiarize yourself with this distinctive trip?

Trout season opened this morning at 5.

Considering the briskness of the skies at that middle-of-the-night hour, we suspect more fishermen than trout got caught.

Doug Sanders shoots a 65 yesterday to take a three-stroke lead in the $35,000 Greensboro Open and, you know, that's pretty fair golf.

But what's happening to our Sam Snead? He's always practically owned the little tournament.

And the Phillies open a three-game series at St. Louis today and a sweep would make 'em look very, very good.

One thing we've got to remember: This new first division ball club simply has to lose one occasionally.

Lovely weekend for driving and much driving there'll be. Won't you please be careful?

Happy Easter!

Coed Arrested, Dope On Campus Probed

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI)—A pretty coed whose arrest touched off an intense narcotics investigation at Indiana University has been suspended from classes, an IU official said last night.

The action was taken as authorities probed reports that dope had been sold directly on campus and was used at marijuana parties on the university grounds. At least a dozen students were reportedly involved.

The investigation followed the arrest Thursday night of Miss Nancy C. Dillingham, 21, on preliminary charges of violating the Indiana Narcotics Act prohibiting possession of marijuana.

Monroe County Prosecutor Thomas Hoadley said Miss Dillingham was arrested as she drove away from her rooming house. She was released on $500 bond Friday pending an appearance in City Court Monday.

Hoadley, who said the marijuana was supplied by a "Chicago syndicate," said an agent from the Federal Narcotics Bureau would arrive here Wednesday to aid in the investigation.

Arrested On Tip

He said Miss Dillingham was arrested on a tip from an informer who said marijuana could be found in her apartment. He said $50 worth of raw marijuana was found in cans and coffee jars in her apartment.

Police said they found a note reading: "Nancy, here is your week's supply." The note was signed "Fritz," police said.

The signer was identified by Hoadley as Fritz Fisher, a graduate student at IU and former member of last year's Ohio State diving team. Fisher was expected to return to Indiana early next week from his family home at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to face charges of possession of narcotics.
